Record livestock auction benefits 4-Hers, foodbank

184 animals sell for $241,950 with 5 to 6 tons of meat going to House of Hope pantry

By MARK CAMPBELL
Madison Courier staff

The 2019 Jefferson County 4-H Fair Livestock Auction dropped the gavel on 184 animals Friday for a record $241,950 sale as local businesses and individuals dug deeper into their wallets than ever before to support the county's youth at the culmination of yearlong beef, swine, sheep, goat and specialty 4-H projects.

And then, many of those same businesses and individuals extended that support further into the community than ever before by donating almost half of those animals — up from just 22 percent in 2018 — to benefit food insecure families of Jefferson County through the House of Hope food pantry in Madison.

The doubling of the animals going to House of Hope was part of an overall "50 for 50" goal to recognize and honor Purdue Extension Educator Lonnie Mason in his 50th season as the local farm agent for Jefferson County.

As the auctioneer blitzed through the 184 animals to be sold, the "50 for 50" goal was met by the halfway mark of the auction. But, donations to the food bank never subsided with 91 total animals eventually earmarked for donation or 49 percent of a livestock auction that included 24 beef, 102 swine, 53 sheep and five specialty animals.

"It's just great. I think we ended up with 91 total animals and last year we got 44," House of Hope President Anne Andreasen said Monday. "So it's double the amount we got last year. We are all just in a tremendous

Weather service: Dangerously high heat, humidity coming

Courier staff report

The National Weather Service in Louisville warned Wednesday morning that heat indices could range from 100 to as high as 110 each afternoon from Thursday into Sunday, with the highest heat indices west of I-65.

"A dangerous and widespread summer heat wave is expected through this upcoming weekend across much of the Central and Eastern U.S. A large dome of high pressure will allow high temperatures to surge into the 90s and 100s in many locations, while heat indices will top 100 and approach 110 degrees or higher. There also will be no relief at night, as low temperatures remain in the upper 70s and 80s," the warning said.

The heat can affect animals as well as people.

Signs of heat stress can vary depending on the type of animal, Purdue University agriculture advises. One of the first signs is faster breathing or panting versus a normal respiratory pattern.

Animals' water consumption in hot weather conditions will increase 50-100 percent. A clean supply of water should always be available to help reduce the risk of heat-related illness. When animals start to show signs of heat stress, it's important to get them cool as quickly as possible.

The first thing you should do when your animal shows signs of heat stress is to start running cool, continuous water over its back and head. Running a fan during this time also helps quickly lower the animal's temperature.

Other things to remember:

• Car interiors can reach lethal temperatures in a matter of minutes. Never leave pets, children, or the elderly unattended in parked vehicles. The extended period of high heat and humidity can worsen the effects of heat stress.

• Drink plenty of fluids...stay in an air-conditioned room...stay out of the sun...and check up on relatives, neighbors and pets.

A year after tragedy, Branson debates future of duck boats

Indiana

BRANSON, Missouri — A year after a duck boat sank and killed 17 people in a Missouri lake, the future of the tourist attraction remains a topic of debate.

Former Branson Mayor Karen Best had to inform the families of those who died on July 19, 2018, on Table Rock Lake. She told The Kansas City Star that she will never forget the survivors' screams and crying, and she doesn't see any reason the duck boats should return to the lake. Best's replacement, Mayor Edd Akers, said he is open to the attraction returning if the boats are altered and have improved safety measures. Akers said when all the lawsuits from the tragedy are settled, he will propose that the city create a memorial to the duck boat victims, nine of whom were from one Indianapolis family.

AG's lawyers deride groping claims

INDIANAPOLIS — Lawyers for Indiana's attorney general argue that allegations he drunkenly groped four women during a party don't meet the legal standard of a misuse of power. Court documents filed on Republican state Attorney General Curtis Hill's behalf call for the women's federal lawsuit against him to be thrown out by a judge. Hill is accused of touching the backs or backsides of a state lawmaker and three legislative staffers at an Indianapolis bar. The women allege sexual harassment and defamation by Hill. Hill's lawyers, though, wrote that "the alleged conduct is no different than that which might occur in bars anywhere." The attorney general's office argues the lawsuit's claims against the state should be dismissed, in part, because the women work for the legislative branch and Hill isn't their employer.

Hunting show ex-host pleads guilty to poaching

PEORIA, Illinois — An Illinois man who was a host of a TV show about hunting has pleaded guilty in a poaching investigation. Chris Brackett of East Peoria admits that he killed two deer in Indiana in 2013 and transported an 11-point buck to Illinois, in violation of federal law. Indiana allowed hunters only to kill one buck. The Journal Star reported Brackett was in federal court in Peoria on Tuesday. Prosecutors have agreed to a 30-month probation sentence when he returns to court on Nov. 5. Brackett also can't hunt anywhere during that period and must pay $30,000. Brackett nicknamed the 11-point buck "the unicorn buck" for its antler formation. The buck was featured on his show, "Fear No Evil," on the Outdoor Channel.

2 groups appeal permit for coal-to-diesel plant

DALE — Two southern Indiana groups are appealing an air permit that state regulators recently approved for a planned $2.5 billion coal-to-diesel plant. The environmental law firm Earthjustice prepared the appeal on behalf of Southwestern Indiana Citizens for Quality of Life and Valley Watch. The groups say they're concerned about potentially "dangerous air pollution" being released by Riverview Energy's planned project in Dale, about 40 miles northeast of Evansville. The (Jasper) Herald reported the appeal asks Indiana's Office of Environmental Adjudication to vacate the permit, which the Indiana Department of Environmental Management approved on June 11. The plant would convert coal into diesel fuel and Naphtha. It's expected to release about 2.2 million tons of carbon dioxide, 225 tons of carbon monoxide and 120 tons of sulfur dioxide annually.

Man accused of labor trafficking of minors

BOWLING GREEN, Kentucky — A man is being accused of bringing 12 children from out of state into Kentucky to sell candy for him. The Kentucky Attorney General told news outlets Tuesday that Shawn Floyd, 54, was being investigated for human trafficking of minors in several Kentucky counties over the past two years. A statement from Attorney General Andy Beshear said Floyd was arrested Friday after a traffic stop. He was charged with endangering the welfare of a minor and having a controlled substance prescription not in its original container. Floyd and the 12 children are from Indiana with the youngest being 11. Floyd forced the children to share a hotel room with three adults and made them buy their own meals.

Officer fatally shoots man at truck stop

MEMPHIS (AP) — Authorities say a sheriff's officer fatally shot a man at a southern Indiana truck stop after the man was seen firing a handgun into the ground. Indiana State Police say officers from the Clark County sheriff's office responded around midday Tuesday to Love's Travel Stop near Memphis after a request from Charlestown police, who were working on a missing person case involving a man who was believed to be suicidal. Charlestown police believed 62-year-old Stephen E. Fischer of Charlestown was at the truck stop and state police say sheriff's officers found him armed with a handgun. State police say officers tried non-lethal options, but at least one shot Fischer. Police say he was taken to a hospital in nearby Louisville, where he died.

Indiana State Police are investigating.

MISSION Act benefits subject of town hall

MARION, Illinois — The U.S. Department of Veterans Affairs is holding a town hall in southwestern Indiana to talk about new health care options for ex-military. With the implementation of the MISSION Act last month, Veteran Affairs officials say the agency has improved its ability to provide health care veterans need. VA spokesman Kevin Harris said one of the lesser known provisions of the law allows eligible veterans access to urgent and walk-in care at participating clinics in their communities. Eligible veterans do not need to get prior authorization from Veteran Affairs to visit an urgent care provider in VA's network. Wednesday evening's town hall has been scheduled to allow beneficiaries to ask questions and get feedback from VA officials. The event will be at Veterans of Foreign Wars Post 1157 in Vincennes.

2 arrested in multi-year probe of public corruption

MUNCIE — A Muncie city official and a local contractor have been indicted on federal charges that are the latest to come out of a probe of public corruption in the city. Federal prosecutors say Debra Nicole Grigsby, 44, of Muncie and Tony Franklin, 60, of Yorktown were arrested Tuesday. They're charged with conspiracy to commit wire fraud, wire fraud, making false statements and falsification of documents in a federal investigation. Prosecutors say Grigsby agreed as the Muncie Sanitary District's administrator to steer infrastructure contracts to Franklin in exchange for kickbacks. Their arrests are the latest from a multi-year federal investigation of public corruption in Muncie. Muncie's former building commissioner was sentenced in January to two years in prison for money laundering and wire fraud.

Father of teen killed in pursuit sues police

KOKOMO — The father of a 15-year-old boy who was killed in a car crash during a police pursuit is suing two police departments and an officer, alleging that "careless and negligent acts" on their part led directly to his son's death. Travis L. Abston Jr. of Battle Ground died in a two-car crash in Kokomo last September during a police chase that followed reports the teen was potentially armed and dangerous, and driving a stolen car. The lawsuit filed by Travis Abston Sr. in Tippecanoe County alleges that law enforcement is at fault and that his son's death was avoidable. It alleges that "careless and negligent acts" on the part of both departments — and specifically Burk — led directly to Travis Abston Jr.'s car crash death. The complaint contends that Burk falsely told Kokomo police that the teen might have a gun and was possibly planning to carry out a school shooting in Kokomo, prompting that school to close for the day, the Kokomo Tribune reported. The police pursuit began in Kokomo near the teen's mother's home and ended with the crash where the teen died from blunt force trauma to the head, neck and chest. An autopsy found that he was high on methamphetamine at the time of the fatal crash.

Police say trucker speeding in crash that killed 3

INDIANAPOLIS — Police say a semitrailer's computer data says it was going above the speed limit when it slammed into a line of vehicles on an Indianapolis highway, killing a woman and her 18-month-old twin daughters. State police say Interstate 465 traffic was slowed for a construction zone when the crash happened Sunday. A preliminary probable cause affidavit filed in Marion County Court says the semitrailer was going 65 mph in a 45-mph zone. Police say the semi driver, Bruce Pollard, 57, of Sturgeon, Missouri, told investigators at various times that he was going 35 mph, was reaching for his iced tea and a car had cut him off. Pollard was jailed on preliminary charges including reckless homicide and is scheduled to appear in court Thursday.

Toddler saved in lake after winds carry inflatable

MICHIGAN CITY — Witnesses say a toddler was rescued in Lake Michigan after he drifted away from his family on an inflatable duck in Indiana. Dave Benjamin told WBBM-TV that a boater finally grabbed the boy after the duck flipped over Monday, off Washington Beach in Michigan City. Benjamin tried to reach the boy on a paddleboard. He said there was a feeling of "exhaustion and high anxiety" as the child's inflatable was carried away by wind. The boy's mother couldn't immediately reach him.

Kentucky deputy shot during wellness check

WHITLEY CITY — A sheriff's deputy who was shot in southeastern Kentucky while conducting a wellness check is reported in stable condition after surgery.

In a news release, Kentucky State Police say McCreary County sheriff's deputy Dustin Watkins went to visit a home Tuesday around 8 p.m. when a man sitting in a vehicle fired several shots from a handgun. Watkins, 28, was struck at least once. State police say Mark L. Dungan, 48, fired several rounds and then fled in the vehicle, striking the patrol car of a county constable as he sped away. Police later found Dungan at a nearby cemetery and arrested him without incident. He faces several charges. Watkins underwent surgery at the University of Tennessee Medical Center and was listed in stable condition Wednesday morning.

Student begins trial for threatening comments

LEXINGTON — A Kentucky police sergeant testified that a man accused of terroristic threatening owned ammunition that could be considered military grade.

The Lexington Herald-Leader reported Tuesday began the second day of Timothy Felker's trial. He's accused of saying he would "shoot up" his school.

Lexington police Sgt. Daniel Burnett testified that Felker's ammunition had a "full metal jacket" and was designed to pierce things like light body armor.

Principal Betsy Rains said she received multiple tips about Felker making threatening comments. A student testified that she was around Felker when he'd made the comments and Felkers's tone became more threatening. After his arrest, Felker bonded out of jail. Burnett said Felker could have legally bought another firearm after being released on bond. The trial is ongoing.

Company to open CBD oil operation in Kentucky

FRANKFORT — Kentucky officials say a company that specializes in CBD oil extraction and distillation plans to build a $6 million-plus manufacturing plant in Boyle County. Gov. Matt Bevin's office says the venture will create up to 34 full-time jobs over a decade. State officials say the announcement by International Farmaceutical Extracts is the latest sign that Kentucky's hemp industry is flourishing. Officials say the company plans to buy an existing facility in Danville for the operation. They say the company will use its extraction and distillation technology to produce CBD oil from hemp flower pellets. At full capacity, the plant will use hemp flowers from about 15,000 acres of local farms. Hemp-derived CBD oil has become increasingly popular as a health product. Kentucky has been at the forefront of hemp's comeback.

4 months to raise $300M for new mill

LOUISVILLE — Braidy Industries says it has about four months to raise $300 million in equity capital for a proposed aluminum mill in Kentucky or risk losing a large investment. The Courier Journal reported Braidy provided the details in a U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission filing this week about its agreement with United Co. Rusal. The Russian aluminum company has ties to Russian oligarch Oleg Deripaska. Rusal has been under U.S. sanctions until earlier this year. It recently announced plans to invest $200 million in Braidy's planned $1.7 billion mill near Ashland. According to Braidy's

New pot laws bedevil police

Border states' legalization of pot affects Southern Indiana

By APRILE RICKERT
(Jeffersonville & New Albany) News and Tribune

SOUTHERN INDIANA — As Indiana remains landlocked on three sides by states with some level of legal acceptance of marijuana, Southern Indiana police deal with increased flow of the drug from other areas, forcing lawmakers to ponder where the state is headed.

Illinois recently became the 11th state plus the District of Columbia to legalize the medicinal and recreational use of marijuana, joining Michigan. Ohio is one of 22 states that allow medicinal use only, while Indiana and Kentucky retain laws against any possession of the drug.

What this means for Indiana, some law enforcement officers report, is an increasing flow of the drug in various forms — plants, oil, wax, vape pens, and infused into new products like edibles — being brought across the border from states where it is legal.

While police say it may be too soon to see effects from the bordering states, specifically Illinois, Southern Indiana has experienced an increase in presence of marijuana.

Sgt. Carey Huls with the Indiana State Police said that marijuana has always been prevalent, but police are now seeing more of the specialty products coming from states like California or Colorado with more established laws allowing their use. Some products are physically brought in, while others are sent directly to Indiana by mail or third party carriers for sale here.

"It's not uncommon to see those," Huls said. "I won't say it's significant, but it's definitely on the radar more than it was before."

UPHOLDING THE LAW

It's a misdemeanor for possession of any amount of marijuana in Indiana, which can turn into a felony charge if the person has more than an ounce, or has a prior drug conviction.

But police said it's more than just about upholding the state statutes — the products coming in are sometimes much stronger than before, and attractive packaging like colorful wrappers, candy-flavored weed or THC oil in soda — can attract a much younger market.

"We're just concerned for the safety of everybody, especially when you see something packaged in a way that might introduce younger people to it," Huls said. "It's a dangerous product — many people disagree and say marijuana is very safe, but many of these products [are] not regulated.

"Regardless of that, marijuana is illegal in Indiana and we're going to enforce it."

Clarksville Police Chief Mark Palmer has also reported seeing a marked increase in the presence of marijuana over the past few years.

"It started small and it's escalated, but with more states [legalizing] marijuana, we've definitely felt the effects here," he said.

In November, Clarksville Police Detective Joel DeMoss headed up an investigation with the Southern Indiana Drug Task Force that led to the arrest of two suspects and the seizure of $1.7 million in cash and $1.5 million in drugs, including more than 100 pounds of marijuana, 15,000 marijuana vape pens and four pounds of THC wax.

There have also been more online sales discovered or third-party deliveries, which means it's being shipped directly from a state where it's legal.

Law enforcement must get creative when looking for those large-scale operations that may be more harmful than marijuana alone, those which Palmer said use the profits to fund operations for harder drugs or human trafficking.

"States that it's still illegal in are learning how to adjust to work with the law, so we're doing proper enforcement," he said. "I'm sure at some point in the future all states will probably legalize it in some form or fashion, but it's definitely a hardship on those states now."

LOOKING AT THE LAW

While Indiana has had legislation come before the General Assembly in recent years, lawmakers have failed to push the envelope to allow marijuana use.

Indiana House Bill 1283, which died earlier this year without making it far, would have decriminalized the possession of 30 grams or less of marijuana or five grams of hash oil or hashish, making them class D infractions.

In 2018, a House bill in support of medicinal use for the drug also failed.

State Rep. Rita Fleming, D-Jeffersonville, said she wants to take a step back and look at how things have happened in states like Colorado, to see how decisions to decriminalize marijuana would affect Indiana, such as bringing in more money in taxes.

As a physician, she has given thought to the health effects of usage — there's evidence it may help alleviate pain or nausea, and she wants to know if it could help people who are getting off harder drugs such as opioids or methamphetamine.

"I don't find that to be terribly controversial," she said. "But on the other hand, to allow more widespread use of marijuana, I'm not saying it's a bad thing, but I do want to look at more data."

Fleming said she has other concerns, too. She wouldn't want a pregnant woman or a teenager using the drug, for instance. Before things move, she also wants to make sure to talk to police, to see if they believe marijuana leads to more criminal activity, or if decriminalizing it would free up resources for police to pursue other crimes.

"I want to hear law enforcement's take on this because they're on the front lines," she said. "I think before we pass any kind of legislation, we really need input from those who deal with it at that level."

Two were arrested in an October, 2018, drug bust by the Southern Indiana Drug Task Force, which seized up to $1.7 million in cash and more than $1.5 million in drugs, including 15,000 marijuana vape pens and more than 100 pounds of marijuana. (Photo by Aprile Rickert)

Health officials won't ban tattoos over scars

FRANKFORT — A proposal to ban tattooing on scarred skin will fade away after Kentucky health officials backed off the proposed regulation. State officials said Tuesday that updated regulations for tattoo studios will move forward without the proposed ban on tattoos over scars. The Cabinet for Health and Family Services says it received more than 600 public comments on the matter. The cabinet said there's a lack of "available evidence to support" the proposed ban. The proposal drew a backlash from groups that said the proposed rule was unwarranted and unfair. In May, health officials said the issue needed more review.

Under the new rules governing tattoo parlors, a person registering as a tattoo artist will have to complete blood-borne pathogen training. The cabinet also updated the disinfectant and equipment sterilization process.

Tick removed from Kentucky man's eye

PRESTONSBURG — A Kentucky man who went to the doctor with an irritated eye got the unsavory news that it contained a tick. WYMT-TV reported an optometrist used tweezers to remove the tick from Chris Prater's eye. Prater works for an electric company and had left a job site where his crew had removed a tree from power lines when his eye started bothering him. He noticed a tiny spot on his eye and tried to flush it several times to no avail. Finally, he went to the doctor and admits he got "scared a little bit" at the diagnosis. After numbing Prater's eye, the doctor removed the tick. Prater was sent home with antibiotics and steroid drops. Prater said he uses bug repellent before he starts each work day, "but you can't spray your eyes."

Coal company files for bankruptcy

LEXINGTON — A coal company with mines in Kentucky and West Virginia has filed for Chapter 11 bankruptcy. Blackhawk mining said in a news release that the restructuring will allow it to eliminate more than 60 percent of its debt. The company has 10 mining complexes and mines metallurgical coal, which is used in the steelmaking process. Blackhawk said the bankruptcy process should move swiftly and be completed in 60 days, with no disruptions to the company's 2,800 employees or its customers. The privately owned company, based in Lexington, Kentucky, said Monday it has entered into agreements with about 90 percent of its lenders. The restructuring includes all of Blackhawk's wholly owned subsidiaries. Blackhawk CEO Jesse Parrish said the bankruptcy plan "represents a significant step in our ongoing efforts to position Blackhawk for long-term success."

American Legion at Pendleton prison

Helping inmates prepare for life outside

Veterans' group meetings give inmates 'sense of belonging'

By BROOKE KEMP
(Anderson) Herald Bulletin

William Young talks about the American Legion post at the Pendleton Correctional Industrial Facility. "We've served our country honorably and, even though we messed up in society, they're giving us a second chance," Young said. "It lets us know that, overall, even though we made mistakes, we're not forgotten." The Herald Bulletin photo)

PENDLETON — When glancing at 55-year-old William A. Young, his tan jumpsuit makes it clear that he is an inmate at the Correctional Industrial Facility. Upon closer inspection, however, one might notice his neatly polished shoes or a collection of cards hanging around his neck.

The first and most visible card is his form of identification. Below that, however, is his nationally recognized membership card to the American Legion.

Before being sentenced in 2008 to nearly 45 years in prison for attempted murder and robbery with serious bodily injury in Marion County, Young served as a mechanic in the U.S. Army. His expected release date, according to Indiana Department of Correction records, is August 2028.

During that time in the Army, he learned many lessons that still carry over into his daily life in prison — one of which being pride in his appearance.

He first joined the American Legion while in prison in Wabash. When he transferred to the Correctional Industrial Facility, Young said he was relieved to learn it too had a Legion available for honorably discharged veterans.

Simply having the group's monthly meeting to look forward to is helpful in breaking up the monotony of being in prison, Young said, but being in the American Legion also gives him a "sense of belonging."

"We've served our country honorably and, even though we messed up in society, they're giving us a second chance," Young said. "It lets us know that, overall, even though we made mistakes, we're not forgotten."

As the post's chaplain, Young prays with and for other inmates, leads prayers at ceremonies and stays in touch with the commander of the American Legion to inform him of the spiritual state of Post 503.

The American Legion is not the only program Young is involved in, however, nor is it the only one available to him and other inmates.

He also works in the prison's brake shop and is part of the group in charge of putting up and taking down the flags each day in accordance with flag code.

While his different duties can be challenging, Young said he is the type of person who enjoys staying busy and working hard. Dale Fleming, program director at the Correctional Industrial Facility, however, said Young is "modest."

"(Young) is very dependable," Fleming said. "He's very consistent and respected amongst other Legion members, kind of like an elder, I guess you would say."

Fleming said the Legion and other programs offered at the facility provide an important opportunity for inmates to connect with and learn from one another. Having people like Young around allows for some inmates to have role models and others to act as a positive example or mentor.

"It's definitely a role that's needed," Fleming said. "Some guys will come into programs for the wrong reason and develop a sense of entitlement — you know, 'You owe me because …' — and when you have genuine guys like Mr. Young, it helps even that out."

Beyond character, Deputy Warden of Programs and Reentry Delana Ritchie said, important life lessons can be gained from participating in any of their programs — from learning how to grow food alongside master gardeners to creating a craft.

"Even doing just one project with these guys, they were like, 'I have something to go home and talk to my kids about,' or, 'I have something I can talk to them on the phone about,' or, 'When I get released I have something that I can do with my grandkids or kids,'" Ritchie said. "I think bringing all of these different types of programs is something that they would have never gotten if they ended up staying where they were (before prison) because it's not something that they would get to do every day."

With this in mind, Ritchie said, staff at the Correctional Industrial Facility try to expose inmates to "as much diversity and culture" as possible to help "broaden their minds" and prepare them for when they reenter society.

Ritchie said she has enjoyed being able to see the change in involved inmates, especially those who work in the garden — which is almost two acres and still growing — or the programs that allow them to take care of cats and train dogs.

"Some of the times, this is the first thing that they have gotten to actually take care of," Ritchie said. "They may have had two or three kids, but they've not actually had the opportunity to take care of them or didn't have the responsibility part in their life. Now they're responsible for something that is completely and totally dependent on them and that just kind of turns them around."

Fleming added that involvement teaches delayed gratification and often simulates the workplace, as inmates are able to develop a reputation, have pride in their work and move up through the ranks of an organization.

"If you work at (Department of Correction) long enough, you're going to run into some guys you know at Walmart or anywhere," Fleming said. "You'd be surprised by some of the people in positions that actually were incarcerated and got their life together."

Charlie's Beat

Nathan Murphy found his calling building fine guitars

By CHARLIE ROHLFING

Madison is blessed to have (at least) two skilled luthiers plying their craft in our community. I've already done a story on Clint Bear and the wonderful guitars he makes, one of which I proudly own and play. Now Nathan Murphy has honed his style and his skills to the point where he is turning out some outstanding instruments as well.

"It all started for me about four years ago," Nathan said. "I was attending a woodworking school up near Indianapolis, thinking I wanted to be a furniture maker. But then I took an elective course in building acoustic guitars and my future just kind of opened up for me. This is what I want to do with my life.

"I've built close to 20 guitars now, and it's really taken this long to get my craft where I want it. I feel like the guitars I'm building now are excellent quality, and I'll proudly put them up against anything out there for craftsmanship and tone."

Nathan is a home-schooled Madison native, and an "unapologetic" Christian, first and foremost. "I'm looking for that lifelong balance between my guitar making and serving the lord," he said. "My goal is to build up the guitar business where I can make a living, provide for a family, and nurture my faith.

Nathan's business is called Zamar Instruments, which is a Hebrew word that means 'to praise the Lord with a stringed instrument.' His guitars sell for a little over $2,000, but the price goes up if you want a bunch of custom flourishes and special details.

"My ideal guitar is the smaller OM body style, with a traditional Sitka spruce top and mahogany body. I prefer things clean without a lot of inlays and decoration. My emphasis is on tone and playability.

"The beauty of being a custom builder is I can assess each guitar as it progresses. I let the wood tell me how it wants the guitar to sound, and then I can focus in that direction. I don't try to force a certain sound, you can't do that with a natural material like wood. My goal is a well-balanced instrument with all the volume and voice it has to give.

"My goal is to create a friendship between the guitar and the player, a friendship that you never get to the end of. I also want my guitars to work well with all the different genres of music, so you don't have to switch guitars when you switch styles. The ultimate test is to have you pick up a Zamar guitar and never want to put it down."

At this time Nathan has several guitars in his workshop under construction, and can offer those for sale in a month or so. If you want a totally custom built instrument from scratch, the wait would be more like three months. Check out ZamarIntruments.com for more details.

state of shock. My guess is that amount of meat will last us until next spring."

Andreasen said the list House of Hope will receive includes six steers (7,390 pounds on the hoof), 68 hogs (15,634 pounds) and the remainder in sheep (2,110 pounds). Considering that about 40 percent of each animals' live weight can be butchered into meat — House of Hope will turn it all into ground beef, pork and mutton because that is the least expensive to process and the most usable by its 300 to 400 clients per month — that should produce between 10,000 and 12,000 pounds of food for families in need.

She said the roughly 5-6 tons of meat will fill the agency's walk-in freezer with more going to an overflow freezer. The meat is then made available to food insecure families and individuals through House of Hope and other food providers like the Southwestern Schools Food Pantry for food insecure students and their families.

Andreasen noted the approximately $20,000 in processing costs will be covered by Hoosiers Feeding the Hungry, all at no expense to House of Hope.

The top earners in each of the eight auction categories ranged from the $4,000 paid by Chandler Select for the grand champion beef raised by MacKenzie Phillips to the $1,000 each paid for specialty products like Aden Smith's rabbit by Morgan and Nay Funeral Centre and Taylor Hardymon's grand champion poultry by Poor Jack Amusements.

The grand champion meat goat sold by Sydney Hammock went for $3,500 to Chandler Chevrolet and Zimmer Tractor while the grand champion swine sold by Jonathan Stockdale went for $3,100 to Auxier Gas and Farmers Bank of Milton.

In other specialty projects, a pound of cheese from the grand champion dairy goat raised by Maeci Marshall was bought by Jenner & Pattison Law Office and Gateway Investment Services for $1,400 and a gallon of milk from the grand champion dairy cow raised by Dawson Scott was bought by German American Bank for $1,400.

The second highest animal to be auctioned Friday was the reserve grand champion beef sold by Jonathan Anderson for $3,900 to Majesty Express and the reserve grand champion swine raised by Adalyn Leach bought for $2,900 by L&N Machine.

The $241,950 for 184 animals auctioned Friday was well above the $215,175 paid for 196 animals in 2018. In 2016 and 2017, a total of 200 animals were sold each year for $234,875 and the previous record high auction $235,450, respectively.

The breakdown on Friday was 102 hogs sold for $121,900, 53 sheep sold for $56,750, 24 beef sold for $55,000 and the five specialty items for a total of $8,300.

Woods trying to get up to speed for final major of year

Tiger Woods

By DOUG FERGUSON
AP Golf Writer

PORTRUSH, Northern Ireland — Tiger Woods was on the practice range when the gates at the British Open opened Tuesday, and before long he was on the tee and ready to go. He just didn't go for very long.

Woods played a full round at Royal Portrush when he arrived Sunday morning, and then again on Monday. For his third day of getting to know a links course that hasn't hosted the British Open in 68 years, Woods made it down No. 1 and then skipped over to the 13th and played the homestretch.

It would be simple to assume it was fatigue. After all, Woods hasn't competed since June 16 at the U.S. Open, and he has only 10 rounds under his belt since his victory in the Masters for his 15th career major.

In this case, no one wants to overdo it at a major, so this was nothing out of the ordinary.

Then again, very little is ordinary with golf's biggest star these days.

When asked if there was anything physically bothering him outside the norm, Woods smiled and said, "Anything outside the norm." The laughter made it hard to hear him say, "No."

His chances at the British Open are nearly as mysterious as Royal Portrush.

Even at age 43, with four knee surgeries and, more recently, more back surgeries behind him, he showed how capable he was against a young generation of talent by winning at Augusta National with smart, strategic golf to overcome a two-shot deficit and win a fifth green jacket.

It's everything since then that speaks to his outlook on golf.

He took a month off to recover emotionally and physically from his taxing win at the Masters, only to miss the cut at the PGA Championship. He played the Memorial and then the U.S. Open, and then he was off to Thailand for a family holiday before returning home to Florida. At this rate, he'll play no more than 14 times in the PGA Tour season, though he still has a few events overseas at the end of the year.

This is the new norm.

Woods played plenty last year trying to get back inside the top 50 in the world — he now is up to No. 5 — to become eligible for World Golf Championships he once took for granted. It led to more golf than he wanted to play.

"So this year I made a conscious effort to cut back on my schedule to make sure that I don't play too much," he said. "I want to play here as long as I possibly can. And you have to understand, if I play a lot, I won't be out here that long."

The trick now is to figure out how much he needs to compete in tournaments to be ready, and listening to his body.

And still to be determined is what kind of weather — the wind, in particular — Woods and the rest of the players will see. The wind has not been the prevailing direction for two days of practice, and it hasn't been

BACK TO WORK: Trimble County's football team began practice for the upcoming season on Monday. Several Raiders work on the ladder drill (above) under the watchful eye of assistamt coach David Marsh. Trimble County ready to resume football in 2019

Monday was the first day for football practice in Kentucky and like every other school in the state, the Trimble County Raiders were out on the field bright and early getting in their reps.

It's a sight some thought they might not see again after the school opted to cancel both the varsity and junior varsity football seasons last year due to low numbers. But under the eye of new coach Brian Simmins, the Raiders are back in action.

"It's something our school needed and it's something that we needed as a community," Simmins said on Monday. "It was a real blow to the community to lose the program. These guys deserve to have a future and they deserve to have Friday night opportunities that I had. And doggone it, I'm not going to allow last year's middle school team be a feeder program for Carroll County."

Last year marked the second time in the school's history that a season had to be canceled due to low numbers. The 1984 season was cut short as injuries piled up and the Raiders did not return to the field until 1996.

Trimble tried to make a go of it last season. After posting a second-straight one-win season in 2017, the Raiders had few players show up for the first day of practice. A call for players later in the summer yielded only freshmen and sophomores and the school decided to cut the season rather than risk injuries to their inexperienced players.

With the football program shut down, several players headed to border rival Carroll and helped the Panthers post a winning season and run into the second round of the state playoffs.

Although there was no football at the high school, the middle school program was up and running with Simmins at the helm. A former assistant coach at Bellevue and Walton-Verona, Simmins had not expected to coach football at Trimble but he was willing to answer the call for help.

Now, a year later, many of those kids are suiting up at the high school level and have a year of experience behind them.

"If that junior high program had

Kansas' Miles figures he's back where he belongs — on sideline

By SCHUYLER DIXON
AP Sports Writer

ARLINGTON, Texas — Les Miles sat for more than hour, a Kansas pin on his left lapel and his LSU national championship ring on his right hand, answering wave after wave of often repetitive questions as he closes in on his return to coaching — and the Big 12 — with the long-suffering Jayhawks.

The session started with whether the one-game suspension for running back Pooka Williams in a domestic case was too short and ended with the 65-year-old reminiscing about leaving the Dallas Cowboys for Oklahoma State and his first shot as a head coach nearly two decades ago.

In between, the theme was consistent. The 2011 national coach of the year believes he'll soon be back where he belongs after 2½ years away: on the sideline.

"I think it's an enjoyment and a realization how much I am a football coach and how much I enjoy going to the sideline with my team," Miles said as Big 12 media days opened Monday.

With that thought, Miles tried to peek through the crowd of reporters, looking for one of the tunnels at the home of the Dallas Cowboys because he realized he was on the same field where eight years earlier he led the Tigers into a season opener against Oregon.

"That moment, just kind of something that I fall back on, how much I enjoy taking the field with a team that was ready to play," said Miles, whose team beat Oregon and was 13-0 before losing to Alabama in the BCS championship game to end the 2011 season.

The title came four years earlier with a BCS win over Ohio State. Nearly a decade later, Miles was fired at LSU after a 2-2 start in 2016, having weathered years of criticism that his offense was too old-fashioned for the pass-happy college game.

Now he finds himself in the pass-happiest conference among the Power Five leagues, where outscoring opponents has often been the trick to winning the title, as Oklahoma has shown while winning a record four straight Big 12 championships.

"If we need to throw the ball to win the game, we want to throw the ball to win the game," said Miles, who signed a five-year contract worth $15.1 million before performance incentives. "If we need to run the ball to win the game, we're going to run the ball to win the game."

The toughest questions for Miles were about the focal point of that running game: Williams, who ran for 1,125 yards and seven touchdowns as a freshman. The sophomore was recently reinstated after being away from the team for seven months following his arrest in a domestic battery case involving an 18-year-old woman.

The Kansas student Williams was dating accused him of punching her in the stomach and grabbing her throat.

Williams reached a domestic violence diversion agreement with prosecutors. The suspension for the Aug. 31 season opener against Indiana State has been criticized as insufficient.

Miles said it was important for him to stay out of the investigation by law enforcement and the university's code of conduct proceedings.

"He's been remorseful," Miles said. "He's learned from this experience, as has our team. We're thankful to have him back, and, again, no violence against a woman is OK. I did not make this decision, but I stand by it and see it as a right one."

Miles' return to the Big 12 is similar to his first stint in the league, starting in 2001. Oklahoma State had just one winning record in 12 years before he arrived, then went to bowl games the last three of Miles' four seasons there.

Kansas has gone 18-90 while dumping three head coaches since Mark Mangino was fired two years after leading the Jayhawks to an Orange Bowl win and a 12-1 record in 2007 — the same season Miles won his national title.

Miles, who inherited a strong program from Nick Saban at LSU, went 114-34 with the Tigers, winning at least 10 games in seven of his 11 full seasons. Safety Mike Lee has noticed that ring.

"He wears it every day," said Lee, a senior. "Looking at the ring, I want to get me a national championship ring. But before we get to a national championship, we got to get to a bowl game."

Miles couldn't have scripted that answer any better, and the oldest head coach in the Big 12 believes he can get that process started, using the same energy that was so much a part of the quirky sideline behavior at his previous two stops.

"If it's not the oldest coach, then what is the alternative? I think I'll take being the oldest coach," he said.

And if he seems as if he's slowed down a bit at retirement age, while taking over a football program dwarfed by its basketball counterpart ?

"I can only tell you that my focus is clean," Miles said. "My preparation is early to late. I think this Kansas team will be difficult to reckon with should we stay on task."

In other words, don't sleep on Miles' Jayhawks.

Phillies lose Bruce

Bruce appeared to get hurt on a checked swing. He grabbed his side and departed after a trainer came out to see him.

The Phillies already lost two of their original starting outfielders. Andrew McCutchen tore his ACL on June 3 and Odubel Herrera was suspended for the rest of the season under Major League Baseball's domestic violence policy. Herrera had been struggling at the plate and was benched before his arrest on domestic assault charges. The charges against Herrera in Atlantic City, New Jersey, were dismissed earlier this month.

Bruce is batting .230 with 24 homers and 57 RBIs with the Phillies and Mariners. He was acquired from Seattle on June 2.

much wind at all.

The forecast? Take a pick.

One bulletin provided by the R&A said the tournament days would feature "changeable conditions continuing with showers or longer spells of rain interspersed with drier and brighter interludes." It concluded by saying, "Confidence low in any details at this stage."

That was about as clear as picking who stands the best chance at Royal Portrush.

Woods sees it as other links courses, where power can be equalized by control. Darren Clarke, who forged his game on these links as a junior, felt the same way. He even pointed to a 6-foot wide swath of fairway on a slope at the 17th that would send the ball down toward the green. Now that's control.

U.S. Open champion Gary Woodland sees it differently.

"The last couple of days, power has been a huge deal," Woodland said. "I've hit a lot of drivers."

He played with Matt Kuchar and Zach Johnson on Monday — it would be exaggerating to say Woodland can hit it longer than their drives combined, but not much — and he found a "huge advantage" by being able to send it a long way in the air.

Woods used as references Greg Norman and Tom Watson, two former British Open champions who nearly won in their 50s because length is not as paramount at Augusta National or the other two U.S. majors.

Norman was 53 (and still on his honeymoon with ex-wife Chris Evert) when he had the 54-hole lead at Royal Birkdale in 2008. A year later, a 59-year-old Watson was an 8-foot putt away from winning at Turnberry. He lost in a playoff.

Woods isn't that old. There was some speculation that cool air — at Bethpage Black in May, at Pebble Beach any time of the year — at the previous two majors didn't help his cause as he tries to keep his back loose.

"It's just part of, unfortunately, dealing with the procedures I've had, and being a little bit older," Woods said. "It just doesn't move quite as fast when it's a little bit cooler. But the great thing is playing in an Open Championship, you can do it. Look what Tom did at Turnberry, what Greg did at Birkdale. The golf course is fast enough. You just have to navigate the bunkers and navigate around the golf course."

Schwarber's homer in 10th gives Cubs win over Reds

CHICAGO (AP) — Kyle Schwarber hit a solo home run with one out in the bottom of the 10th inning to give the Chicago Cubs a 4-3 comeback victory over the Cincinnati Reds on Tuesday night.

Schwarber stroked a 1-1 pitch from closer Raisel Iglesias (2-8) into the basket in front of the left field bleachers for his 21st homer.

Robel Garcia and Kris Bryant also connected for the NL Central leaders, who have won six of eight.

Eugenio Suárez homered for Cincinnati, which fell to 7-4 against Chicago this season.

Steve Cishek (3-5) pitched the 10th and four Cubs relievers combined for four scoreless innings.

New catcher Martín Maldonado, acquired Monday night by Chicago from Kansas City, started and went 0 for 4.

Cubs spot starter Alec Mills allowed three runs and five hits over six innings in his season debut. He walked one, struck out two and hit four batters with pitches.

Reds starter Anthony DeSclafani allowed three runs and four hits in 5 2/3 innings.

Cincinnati's Derek Dietrich was hit by a pitch twice to extend his major league-leading total to 20.

Suárez opened the scoring with a solo homer in the first on a 3-2 pitch with two outs for a second straight night.

Cincinnati, though, wasn't through. Yasiel Puig and Dietrich were hit by pitches, and Nick Senzel followed with an RBI single. José Peraza then hit a drive into left-center for a double. Dietrich scored easily to make it 3-0, but Senzel was cut down at the plate.

It was Chicago's second stellar defensive play of the inning. Earlier, center fielder Albert Almora Jr. made a sliding, over-the-shoulder catch on the warning track to rob Joey Votto of an extra-base hit.

Garcia's two-run shot in the second got the Cubs close and Bryant tied it with a solo shot in the sixth to chase DeSclafani, who had retired the previous seven batters.

REDS 6, CUBS 3 (Monday)

The last-place Cincinnati Reds found another way to beat the top team in their division.

Eugenio Suárez and Yasiel Puig each hit his 22nd home run of the season, and Cincinnati rallied past Chicago 6-3 on Monday night.

Jesse Winker raced home with an unearned run to cap a two-run seventh inning that made a winner of All-Star starter Luis Castillo. And although the NL Central standings are tight, the Reds improved to a surprising 7-3 against the first-place Cubs this season.

"We match up well against them," catcher Curt Casali said. "Our team has really risen to the challenge of facing a playoff-caliber team."

After the game, the Cubs acquired catcher Martín Maldonado in a trade with Kansas City that sent left-hander Mike Montgomery to the Royals. In related news, Chicago also announced that All-Star backstop Willson Contreras is going on the 10-day injured list with a strain to the arch area of his right foot.

Casali sent the first pitch from reliever Steve Cishek (2-5) in the seventh into the left field bleachers to tie it at 3. Winker pinch-hit for Castillo and singled, then the Reds jumped on errors by two usually sure-handed Cubs infielders to take the lead.

Winker advanced to second when shortstop Javier Báez couldn't handle Nick Senzel's grounder. Winker came home when Suárez's hard bouncer slipped over David Bote's glove at third.

Pinch-hitter Kyle Farmer and reliever Michael Lorenzen singled home insurance runs in the eighth.

"We just kind of fell apart uncharacteristically," Cubs manager Joe Maddon said. "I have no answer."

Castillo (9-3) allowed three runs on seven hits and struck out 10 through six innings. After throwing 105 pitches, the right-hander left trailing 3-2 before his teammates rallied to get him a win.

"He was really good early," Reds manager David Bell said. "You have to give the Cubs credit. I thought they had a really good approach off him and made it a little tough on him."

gone away, chances are that things would have died down here for quite some time," Simmins said. "Of the 24 or 25 that we have this year, we have 12 or 13 freshmen. The big thing is keeping that core group of kids together. If we can build and add 12 or 13 every year, you're talking about 40-plus kids in a program. That's very important."

The schedule that Simmins has put together this year is a hybrid of both junior varsity and varsity games. While the coach doesn't yet want to throw his young team against bigger and more experienced programs, he does want to make sure the Raiders get a taste of Friday night lights.

"The point of this is to build a program. It's not to throw 11 warm bodies on the field to get their heads kicked in every week," Simmins said. "That's why we went with the JV schedule this year, so that we can build upon a foundation. The plan is that these ninth and 10th graders that are here now are not only playing varsity football before they leave, but competitive varsity football."

Trimble's 2019 football schedule has not yet been released. Switzerland County has a home game with the Raiders listed for Sept. 6.

Gone ... but not forgotten

Staff photos by Mark Campbell and Trenton Scroggins

About 600 veterans and others answered a public call to attend a memorial for U.S. Army Spc. 4 Larry W. Miller, the Vietnam veteran with little known family who was buried Tuesday at the Indiana Veteran's Cemetery in Madison. Rodney Nay, of Morgan-Nay Funeral Centre in Madison had posted on Facebook last week for veterans and others to attend and a standing-room-only crowd did just that — some like a veteran from Rochester, New York, who rode his motorcycle nearly 600 miles to be a pallbearer. "We had 2,000 shares and a 100,000 views — it was amazing ... I just thought it would maybe get a few of the veterans in the area to come to support," Nay said. "I thought 50 to 100 would be a nice turnout. I wasn't expecting 600. We had a lot of people email and show their support, saying they're thinking of him." Louisville Horse and Carriage sent a caisson (photo top) to transport Miller's casket and the Army flag was flown at half staff (photo above). Army soldiers and an honor guard of bikers — Miller (photo inset) was a biker himself before a stroke left him unable to ride — waited to carry the coffin (photo upper left). Nay gets Madison American Legion Post 9 chaplain Mike Bath to sign the guest register as he tried to do with everyone in attendance (photo middle left). Post 9 bugler Doyle Hardesty plays taps (photo left). The overflow crowd waits outside the cemetery chapel during the service (photo below). Nay said the support was phenomenal. "Made me very happy and proud of our community."

PETS NEEDING HOMES

EDGAR

The Madison-Jefferson County Animal Shelter currently has nine dogs or puppies, and a number of kittens available. Pictures of additional pets waiting for adoption can be viewed at www.sisaveapet.com

Normal shelter hours are Monday, Thursday and Friday from noon to 5 p.m., Wednesday from 1 p.m. to 7 p.m., Saturday from noon to 4 p.m., and Sunday from noon to 3 p.m. It is closed Tuesday. The shelter number is (812) 273-1788 and the email is animal.shelter39@jeffersoncounty.in.gov

All cats and kittens are $45 off unless they are already spayed or neutered. Discount is courtesy of the Animal Shelter and the Jefferson County Humane Society.

Volunteers are always welcome at the shelter. Individuals must be at least 16 years old to volunteer. Volunteers can help with everyday cleaning, answering phones, and exercising the pets.

A list of needed items can be found on the shelter website. Donations can be mailed to 2727 Hannah Drive, Madison, IN 47250 or dropped off during shelter hours. The shelter also accepts aluminum and steel cans, which are recycled and the proceeds put toward the medical fund. Recent donations have helped get treatment for a beagle with a skin infection and a cat with wounds. The shelter asks that aluminum and steel donations be separated. Steel cans should also be rinsed before they are dropped off. Cans can be dropped off at any time in a bin located on the east side of the shelter.

Those with missing pets can stop by the shelter, call or email a complete description of the pet, when and where it was last seen, the owner's name and contact information, and a picture of the pet. Pets are held for three days before they are made available for adoption.

Animals should not be abandoned outside of the shelter or dropped off at the shelter after hours.

For animal control issues in Madison, call (812) 265-3347. For animal control issues in Hanover and Jefferson County, call (812) 265-2648.

BRIDGE

FROM ANDREWS MCMEEL

Johann Wolfgang von Goethe said, "A man should hear a little music, read a little poetry and see a fine picture every day of his life."

We can forgive him for failing to add "play a lot of bridge" because the game hadn't been devised when he was alive.

A successful bridge player builds pictures of the unseen hands in his mind's eye and uses them to solve the puzzle of the deal. In today's example, how should East picture the proceedings in four spades after West leads the heart king?

South's two-spade rebid promised at least a six-card suit, so North jumped to the likely game without giving additional information to the opponents.

East starts by considering the target -- the four tricks that the defenders need. Let's work through each suit in turn. Spades: If South's suit is completely solid, the defense probably has no chance, and South might have rebid three spades. Hearts: There is one winner for sure, but declarer can ruff other hearts on the board. Diamonds: With luck, a winner or two. Clubs: Probably no hope, because partner might well have led a singleton there. Where does that leave East-West?

Not looking too picturesque. However, they can stop declarer from ruffing two hearts on the board. Since West might not be able to lead spades safely, East should overtake the heart king and shift to a low trump.

South will probably win, ruff a heart, cash the club ace, ruff a club and take his second high spade, but he must lose one spade, two hearts and one diamond. Smile, please!

Benefit walk to be held for Keeping Pace Cancer Fund

Butch Konkle and his friends at the Route 56 Campground are hosting a benefit walk on Saturday, July 20 from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. at the Route 56 Campground on State Road 56.

Walkers can make their donations to the Jeanne & Butch Konkle Fund or the Keeping Pace Cancer Fund. Both funds are administered by the Community Foundation of Switzerland County, Inc.

The Keeping Pace Cancer Fund was established to assist Switzerland County residents undergoing cancer treatment. The fund helps with the many different needs associated with the cost of cancer treatments such as transportation, food costs, wigs, etc. It also provides cancer treatment bags full of supplies that cancer patients often use during treatments.

The Jeanne & Butch Konkle Fund, a donor-advised fund, was established when Jeanne passed away in 2015. Donor advised funds allow the fund establisher to make grant recommendations to the Community Foundations's board of directors.

Participants are asked to sign in and register for door prizes upon arrival at the campground. There will be a drawing for door prizes at 2 p.m. and participants must be present to win. There will also be a special presentation to the following fire departments: Brooksburg, Madison #2, Ryker's Ridge, Jeff-Craig, Spiceland (Henry Co.) and North Vernon. Food will be provided by the Switzerland County Lions Club.

Needing a new relationship foundation

Annie Lane

Dear Annie: My husband constantly lies by omission of details of what he has done.

He has had two affairs with other women -- that I know of. He thinks if he tells part of the truth, it is OK. That is how his mind works, and he doesn't care what I think.

What is wrong with him? His mother was the same way. -- Questioning in PA

Dear Questioning: No matter what sort of mental gymnastics your husband engages in to convince himself he's not a bad guy, a half-told truth is a lie. If he wants to make things right, he'll agree to go to marriage counseling with you. A counselor might help uncover whatever deep-seated issues drive him toward cheating and lying, and there you two can work together to build a new foundation, because his past actions have put a rot in the old one. Taking things apart and building your relationship anew is your best hope at having a healthy married life.

Dear Annie: I am "Time Capsule in My Attic," who wrote to you earlier this year about finding a 50-year-old box of letters written to me by my high school boyfriend during his first year of college at a prestigious Ivy League school. I was wondering what I should do with them. Back then, I considered your response that I should contact my former boyfriend and send him these letters because he might be interested in reading about his life back then. Your column today featured a letter from Kathi, the retired special manuscripts librarian, who suggested that his college would likely be interested in these letters for research purposes into the day-to-day life of a freshman in 1969. I chose to ignore your advice -- and now Kathi's -- and I disposed of the letters. I will explain why that was the right decision for me.

First of all, I would never send those letters to a college library without first contacting my old boyfriend to ask permission; to do otherwise would be a huge invasion of his privacy and my own. So why did I not take your advice two months ago and contact him to ask if he wanted the letters? I was mostly thinking about him and his family when I decided not to reach out. What if he and his wife are currently going through a rough patch in their relationship and she is a jealous sort who might be threatened by old letters with at least a bit of romance in them? What if curious grown children cannot resist the urge to read these letters and -- God forbid -- they chose to contact me for "old times' sake"? Indeed, a box of old letters could turn into a can of worms, and I was not willing to let that happen.

I remember the day I threw the letters into our town's recycle bin, almost 3,000 miles from the fancy college where he penned his thoughts 50 years ago. I was grateful to have known him, but even more grateful for the full, wonderful life I found for myself without him. I did not want to risk any ill feelings or awkwardness by suddenly reaching out after all these years with that box of letters. -- Right Decision for Me

Dear Right: I'm glad you made the right decision for you. And I'm always interested to hear from previous letter writers about what solutions they tried and how they worked out. So, thanks for sharing!
